

Continuing Education

This activity/event has been submitted to AdventHealth University Division echelon® for consideration of nursing accreditation. AdventHealth University Division – echelon® is accredited as a provider of nursing continuing professional development by the American Nurses Credentialing Center's Commission on Accreditation.

Target Audience

This course serves as an update for Registered Nurses, Licensed Practical Nurses, Advanced Practice Registered Nurses, Physician Assistants, Medical Doctors and other Allied Health Professionals. No pre-requisites required.

Objectives

1. Recognize mindful self-care and self-compassion techniques to reconnect with personal purpose, reduce burnout, and foster resilience and sustained engagement in professional healthcare practice.
2. Identify the key principles of breast cancer radiation therapy and strategies for long-term survivorship care to promote overall health and well-being in breast cancer survivors.
3. Describe the practices of palliative care aimed at enhancing quality of life for cancer patients, including symptom management, psychosocial support, and interdisciplinary collaboration to address physical, emotional, and spiritual needs throughout the cancer journey.
4. Indicate recent oncology drug approvals and their implications for treatment decision-making and patient care in current oncology practice.
5. Recognize the hallmark symptoms of CRS and ICANS and initial management strategies for both conditions as recommended by the American Society of Clinical Oncology.
6. Describe the distinct role of genetic counseling in oncology care and valuable strategies for effective collaboration between nurses and genetic counselors to enhance patient support and care coordination.
7. Identify the unique clinical, psychosocial, and survivorship needs of the young adult oncology population and evidence-based strategies for age-appropriate management to improve outcomes and quality of life for this distinct group.
